Finding the Fourth Dimension: Learning through Practice in the Arts and Humanities Honours Student Bursary

Could a more deliberate and informed approach to speech, gesture, movement, space, and interaction enhance your planned research project? Finding the Fourth Dimension: Learning through Practice in the Arts and Humanities is a one day workshop at ANU.

The purpose of the event is to introduce researchers working in literature and language fields to practical methods for exploring texts and textual content. You do not have to be a performer or drama specialist to participate. The workshop will be led by practice-as-research expert and early modern scholar Dr Bridget Escolme (Queen Mary, UL) and will include a panel of speakers with extensive experience of practical methods in drama and the visual arts.

The workshop will be held on Friday 25 July 2014 from 9.30am – 5.30pm in the Rehearsal Room of the Arts Centre at the Australian National University.

As a means of inducting new researchers into practical methods of research in the Arts and Humanities, the ANU School of Literature, Languages and Linguistics is offering a $200 bursary to assist with travel and accommodation costs for one Honours (or intending postgraduate student) to participate in the Workshop.

To apply please send a 200 word response to the question below to kate.flaherty@anu.edu.au. Please use 'Workshop bursary' as your subject line and include your institutional affiliation and status.

How will participation in the 'Finding the Fourth Dimension' Workshop assist you in your intended postgraduate research project?

Applications are due by Friday 4 July 2014.

The successful applicant will be notified on Monday 7 July 2014.
